No More Band-Aids and Boo Boos!

Although I understand why people use graphics, such as Band-Aids and “boo boos” to illustrate the role of a school nurse, I feel it doesn’t provide a true representation of the complex role of the school nurse and actually does a disservice to school nurses.

This type of graphic is frequently used to illustrate the role of a school nurse. Although loving, this photo portrays the school nurse as a pediatric healthcare provider responding to minor injuries that occur in school; putting a Band-Aid on a boo boo. A school nurse is so much more! Read more.....

How to you plan out your “school health services to-do” list?

We are developing a webinar that will provide guidance to school nurses on how to organize and complete their yearly “to-do” list. Your feedback on when you typically complete school health service tasks is needed!

Grassroots Changes

One of the main goals of the WISHeS Project was to assist school districts in improving school health services. We know that there have been considerable changes in WI districts as a result of all YOUR hard work in implementing the best practice and policy recommendations. We also realize that we have not been able to capture all those remarkable changes in the surveys and interviews we conducted during the 5-year project. We want to highlight YOUR hard work. Teresa DuChateau will be writing a journal article to submit to the Journal of School Nursing. The article will describe the WISHeS Project and highlight the success stories. Please share YOUR success story with us so it can be included in the article. Contact Teresa if you have any stories or questions.
